1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the theoretical aspects of the problem. It is shown that the problem is equivalent to a problem in the theory of differential equations. The main result of this part is the theorem that the problem has a unique solution if the initial conditions are chosen appropriately.
2. In the second part, the problem is solved for the case of a constant coefficient. The solution is obtained by the method of separation of variables.
3. In the third part, the problem is solved for the case of a variable coefficient. The solution is obtained by the method of variation of parameters.
4. In the fourth part, the problem is solved for the case of a non-linear coefficient. The solution is obtained by the method of perturbation theory.
5. In the fifth part, the problem is solved for the
obtained by the method of perturbation theory.
